"The Woman God Changed" First Subject On The Screen

The Celtic romance of Dean Byrne's literary temperament finds abundant room for gratification in his story, "The Woman God Changed," which is shown at local theatres Monday. His genius for creating this type of story makes him peculiarly fitted for the screen. Born in New York he early found his way to Ireland the land of his fathers.
He lived in its fairy stories, read its folklore, attended its schools until at last he emerged a D. A. from University College, Dublin. Mr. Byrne is an athlete and lover of golf and yachting. He is a member of several clubs and a contributor to sports magazines, being considered an authority on boxing and wrestling.

Gloria Swanson An Author!

Gloria Swanson is likely soon to achieve fame as a novelist or short story writer. She is practicing daily when not on duty in an endeavor to perfect herself for authorship honors. Miss Swanson, with Wallace Reid and Elliott Dexter, appears in "Don't Tell Everything," a splendid Paramount picture at local theatres Wednesday and Thursday. It is an outdoor picture, filled with pep and action, and will be welcomed with delight by the admirers of this triumvirate.
